CONSTRUCTION OF CHRISTIANITY

My initial studies on the formation of Christianity started with the 1st Council of Nicaea and the Trinity Controversy in the Church concerning Arius. However, the regional Council of Laodicea solidified the strength of Christianity's indoctrination and mind control into possible perpetuity. We have linked to the Canons of Laodicea.

In 2022, Spirit (Living Energy) sent me to Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic. Spirit told me three things about Christianity: 1) The Bible is a collection of stories, which is designed for man to seek Divinity/Divine light outside of self; 2) Christianity was created for power and dominance over man; 3) Those who wear the cross are under the influence of the Catholic Kingdom.

These are some Major Ecumenical and Regional councils through which Christianity was formed:

- 9) 2nd Council of Nicaea (AD 787)
- 8) 3rd Council of Constantinople (AD 680)
- Monenergism: Jesus the Christ may have had two distinct natures, there was but one energy operative in his person: the Divine energy. Divine Energy was removed from the Bible.*
- 7) 2nd Council of Constantinople (AD 553)
- 6) Council of Chalcedon (AD 451)
- 5) 2nd Council of Ephesus (AD 449)
- 4) Council of Ephesus (AD 431)
- 3) Council of Constantinople (AD 381)
- 2) Council of Laodicea \(AD 364\)
- Must know: Canons 29, 36, 59, 60*
- 1) 1st Council of Nicaea (AD 325)

CHRISTIANITY'S ROLE IN SLAVERY

In 1324 ACE, when Mensa Musa made his pilgrimage to Mecca exposing Mali's gold reserves to the world, the Kingdom of Mali was larger than the Catholic Kingdom. Remember, Catholic means World or Universal. Christianity was constructed in Ecumenical and Regional Councils beginning in 325 AD.

(Remember, Catholicism is a Kingdom in its foundation; Christianity is the religion.)

Portugal entered Africa under Prince Henry. In 1441, Christianity and the Catholic Kingdom which was involved in its construction, had taken root and manifested itself in the support of slavery when Captain Gonsalves took 10 Africans and presented them as a gift to Prince Henry. Prince Henry gave some to the Pope who conferred upon the Prince full possession of all West Africa’s coastal regions.

In 1492, Spain and Portugal were the largest Maritime Powers in the Catholic Kingdom when Christopher Columbus, under the Spanish Flag, landed in the Dominican Republic.

In 1493, Christopher Columbus met with the King of Portugal about possession of this land.

And, In 1494, The Pope settled the disagreement between Spain and Portugal in the Treaty of Tordesillas (tor.duh.see.uhz), which divided the “Americas” and stated, “no power was to occupy any territory already in the hands of a Christian ruler”.

Land west of the Cape Verde Islands, off the coast of northwestern Africa was claimed by Spain. Lands east of the North-South line of demarcation in the Atlantic Ocean approximately 345 miles, was claimed by Portugal.

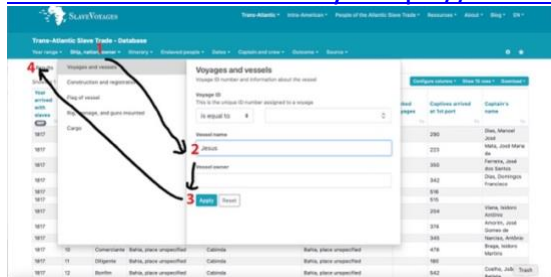

In 1506, the North-South line was moved farther west (~932 mi), which enabled Portugal to claim the eastern coast of what is now Brazil.

Let’s get a fuller understanding of what occurred to help us elevate into Spiritual Freedom.

Columbus expanded the Catholic Kingdom into the “New World”. Over 500 documented Trans-Atlantic and Intra-American slave ships bore the name Jesus.

JESUS OF LÜBECK: HOW AFRICANS WERE LURED INTO ENGLAND'S FIRST SLAVE SHIP

John Hawkins urged the Africans to enter his ship "Jesus of Lubeck," also known as "The Good Ship Jesus." for salvation, those who entered soon found they were barred from disembarking. Full Article

Jesus of Lübeck was a sailing vessel built in the City of Lübeck in the early 16th century. Around 1540 the ship, which had mostly been used for representative purposes, was acquired by Henry VIII, King of England, to augment his fleet.

The ship which saw action during the French invasion of the Isle of Wight in 1545 was later chartered to John Hawkins in 1562 by Queen Elizabeth I after it foundered during a Battle.

Jesus of Lübeck became involved in the Atlantic slave trade and smuggling under John Hawkins. He successfully organized four voyages to West Africa and the West Indies between 1562 and 1568.

Early in his career, he led an expedition in which he violently captured 300 black Africans in Sierra Leone and sold them to Spanish plantations in the Americas.

An account holds that Hawkins who claimed to be a devout Christian and missionary found the Sierra Leoneans harvesting their crops.

He then proceeded to tell the natives of a God named Jesus and of heaven and hell, afterwards he asked those among them who sought to have Jesus as their saviour to enter his ship "Jesus of Lubeck," also known as "The Good Ship Jesus."

His missions were so lucrative that Queen Elizabeth I sponsored his subsequent journeys and provided ships, supplies and guns. She also gave him a unique coat of arms bearing a bound slave.

ENGLAND'S FIRST SLAVE TRADER

John Hawkins was England's first slave trader. In 1562 he sailed from The Barbican in Plymouth with three ships and violently kidnapped about 400 Africans in Guinea, later trading them in the West Indies. Full Article

Between 1562 and 1567 Hawkins and his cousin Francis Drake made three voyages to Guinea and Sierra Leone and enslaved between 1,200 and 1,400 Africans.

According to slavers' accounts of the time this would probably have involved the death of three times that number.

The pattern was consistent. Hawkins sailed for the west coast of Africa and, sometimes with the help of other African natives, kidnapped villagers.

He would then cross the Atlantic and sell his cargo, or those who survived the voyage, to the Spanish. The slave trade was better business than plantations.

John Hawkins

Hawkins' profit from selling slaves was so huge that Queen Elizabeth I granted him a special coat of arms, which has a c. A bound slave was Hawkins' crest

In 1992, 500 years later, Pope John Paul II visit to Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic gave a carefully hidden admission of what many knew in his Santo Domingo Speech, Christianity was purposefully created to colonize and enslave, captured in this NYT article:

Pope John Paul II arrived here tonight on a five-day visit planned around the 500th anniversary of Columbus' arrival in the "Americas".

In a 10-minute arrival statement, the Pope, looking slightly drawn, likened his visit to that of the first missionaries. Then, in a seeming allusion to the bitter dispute over Columbus's legacy, he said "he had come on the 500th anniversary of Christianity in the New World "without a spirit of triumphalism, or false shame, but giving thanks to God."

A directive given to me by the Creator is 'we at One Nation Enlightened Global Kingdom, cannot conflate or synonymously use the terms Jesus, Christian and Christianity.' Spirit stated, 'many seek Spiritual hope in their context of Jesus and Christian.'
